Trial by Newspaper.

Just now a Los Angeles paper is very busy concerning a Congressional contest which will occupy the proper committee of the House of Representatives at the proper time and place. The Herald may be pardoned for suggesting that the issues concerned will not in any case be disposed of by the famous "trial by newspaper." The law is very explicit as to all procedures of this kind. Any candidate who believes that he has grounds for a contest has thirty days after the official declaration of the result to file the grounds of his contest, not upon the newspapers which take such a kindly and disproportionate interest in the matter, but upon the gentleman to whom the certificate of election shall have been given. This individual files a counter paper, testimony is taken, etc., the whole process being quite fully set forth in the law books. The contest is finally decided by the Congress of the United States, which, by the Constitution of the land, is made, in both Houses, the absolute judge of the election and qualifications of its members. Because the contestant happens to be a Democrat he is not debarred by the law from exercising this privilege of the citizen, and we do not think that a newspaper can abridge or extend it.

Southern California and the Senatorship.

While there is a widespread recognition of the great and sterling claims of Hon. George Hearst upon the good will and even gratitude of the Democracy of California, claims which have been greatly reinforced by the very ungracious manner in which he was extruded from his seat in the United States Senate, it is an equally unquestionable fact that Southern California has a long overdue account with Northern and Central California. It is a remarkable circumstance that for all purposes of representation in the higher body of the national legislature Southern California have been practically disfranchised. If the seat now occupied by Senator Williams through a shabby political trick is to be given to a man from Northern or Central California, the people in this section—at least the immense majority of them—would prefer to see the prize carried off by Mr. Hearst. They like him personally and appreciate his great services to the Democratic party. But there are a number of distinguished citizens of Southern California who are capable of filling this exalted post with honor to themselves and credit to the State. It would be hard to show why Southern California should stand around, like a bound boy at a husking, when the high prizes won in the political arena are being distributed. In this connection it is interesting to remark that the Democracy of California are under a weight of obligation to the southern counties. But for the splendid fight made in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Kern, Fresno and Tulare counties, Swift would have been elected and Sargent and Huntington would now be busy whipping a Republican Legislature into line. Nowhere has the Democratic gain been so great relatively as in Los Angeles county. It would be very hard to say why this splendid fervor of Democratic enthusiasm should not be rewarded by giving the Senator to this section. Such action would be in line with sound policy and justice. It is absurd and invidious to establish the rule that the Senators of the United States should always come from the mining counties or the region around the Bay. It has been the rule in the past, but it is a rule which would be far more honored in the breach than in the observance. Under all rules of fair play Southern California ought to be accorded the successor to Senator Williams.

A Model Actor and Sound Views About the Stage.

Messrs. Olmsted and Wales, who have the work for sale, have laid upon our table for review a book entitled "Memories of an Old Actor," by Walter S. Leman. There are few Californians, and in fact few play-goers in the United States, who have not heard and seen this amiable and admirable old gentleman, who, after a stage life of rising fifty years, launches this chatty and entertaining work upon the literary world. We have read it from cover to cover with unabated pleasure, and all who take an interest in the stage would do well to follow our example. Here and there the book has not received that purely technical revision which is necessary to the finish of a literary work, but indulgence will be readily made for these errors of detail. Varnhagen Von Ense wrote of the great Humboldt that he knew nothing about making a book, and yet few works are read with the avidity which the scholar experiences in perusing Cosmos. Mr. Leman's theatrical career covers the best era of the American stage. He first trod the boards in humble roles at a time when the stage was poor but self-respecting and artistic, and when it was fully inspired with the genuine Thespian instinct. Those were the days of accomplished actors and finished stock companies, when slipshod acting would not have been tolerated for an instant. Then the whole interest of a piece was never permitted to center in a single person. While there were stars, the starring system had not been invented. When the elder Booth, Addams, Cooper, Macready, and a score of scarcely lesser lights, were in their meridian, they were supported by polished actors and actresses who frequently divided the honors of the evening with them. Such surroundings were highly stimulating to the younger members of the profession; and they resulted, even when the fire of genius was lacking, in the creation of artists who, like Mr. Leman himself, were honored to a noble calling.

The author, with a pardonable pride, devotes some attention to his own exploits as actor, author and poet, but modestly withal. He was not without civic distinction, and his sterling personal worth was recognized by an election as Justice of the Peace, an office of considerable power in San Francisco, and afterwards by being chosen to fill the post of Public Administrator of that city and county at a time when all the rest of the Republican ticket was snowed under. A pleasing thing, which crops out all through this little book, is the quite pronounced morality of its author. One can read between the lines that the narrator is a thorough gentleman as well as actor, both of the old time.

Mr. Leman has his views of the American drama, and we cannot forbear reproducing a few of them. He says: "We shall have a pure drama, an American drama worthy of the name, when playwrights cease to 'write plays with one part only; when managers relegate the transplanted drama of the demi-monde to the place of its birth, and have sufficient judgment to discover 'merit when the playwright possesses it, even if he should have the misfortune to be born on this side of the Atlantic.'"

"And the American theater will have a better moral standing when 'municipal magistrates have sufficient consideration for the youth who are destined in the immediate future either to honor or disgrace their country, and sufficient official firmness to close the filthy 'dives' of our cities, where men are degraded, women debauched and the drama bastardized by the manager 'God save the mark' who calls his 'den a theater.'"

These are excellent views, capitally expressed. They may and doubtless do belong to the realm of Utopia, but the lover of the drama and the stage at their best, and of good acting as well, are obliged to take refuge from presents chagrin in Utopia. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," and we cannot forbear indulging the fond idea that the day is not far distant when the legitimate drama, with the natural accompaniment of good stock companies, will again be resurrected in this country, to afford the judicious unalloyed pleasure. There is no reason why the stage, hand in hand with the pulpit and the editorial tripod, should not be instruments for the amelioration of mankind, nor can we see why the frightful phantasmas of the burlesque stage and the dive should not be things of the past.

San Bernardino's New Hotel.

San Bernardino is soon to have a fine new brick hotel. As will be seen by notice elsewhere contractors are invited to send sealed proposals to the Secretary of the Hotel Association at San Bernardino.

Tilden Made a Democrat.

Albany Argus.

At one time a well-to-do farmer came into the executive chamber to see Governor Tilden. He was affably received, told to be seated, and from a talk about crops the conversation gradually drifted into politics. The farmer was very intelligent upon this topic. Governor Tilden quickly saw that he could make his visitor a firm friend.

"Have you any sons?" he asked.

"Yes, four," replied the stranger.

"There is William, Robert, Henry and Charles."

"All Democratic?" queried Mr. Tilden.

"All except William," was the reply.

"Have you a notary public in your village?" asked Mr. Tilden.

"I don't know that we have," was the answer.

After a further conversation the stranger left. In a few days there came to the village postoffice a large official envelope addressed to William, the Republican son. It was opened in the family circle and found to contain a notary's commission, with a huge seal, and William's name finely engrossed as a notary public for the village. To the commission was the written autograph of Samuel J. Tilden. The surprise was as great as if William had received a commission as Minister to France. After that there were four Democratic sons in that family circle, and with the "old man," Governor Tilden had five of the firmest friends in the State. And all it cost was a little inquiry and a three-cent stamp to send the commission to the newly-appointed Notary.

TO BE INAUGURATED.

A Fire Alarm System in Which There is Sense.

The bewildering system of ringing bells, a fort et a travers, at engine houses, as if they were possessed by demons; shooting off pistols promiscuously to the danger of people looking out of windows or passing in the street; running around in a dazed and crazed manner, whenever a fire occurs in this city, is about to be abolished. In ten days from now this absurd manner of heralding a conflagration and frightening people out of their wits will be a relic of the past. In that number of days the telegraphic fire alarm system of the Richmond Fire Alarm Company, contracted for by the City Council, will be ready for active work and there will no longer be any possibility for fire engines and fire ladders to run to Boyle Heights when they are wanted, but in Sonoratown. The system of the Richmond is simple, enough, though to look at the complicated, yet reliable indicators at the Central Station, one would not think so. At the Central Station, which is situated in one of the back rooms of the City Hall, on the ground floor, are two No. 20 indicators, and another one to control both these. When an alarm of fire is to be given through any box, say 23, the first door is opened by means of a key which can be found either in a store near by or in any place which may be indicated by the Chief of the Fire Department. Sticking through a hole in the second door is a knob, which being pressed, communicates electrically an alarm to the indicator at the Central Station. This is done by the hand on the dial of the indicator which turns instantly to the number of the box. At the same time the number of the box is struck on all of the six 18-inch gongs placed in the different engine and hose companies four times, and a self-starting Morse clockwork printing telegraph apparatus sticks off of the box four times in succession thus: 23, 23, 23, 23. While the hand points on the dial to the number of any box, all the other boxes are out of circuit, and it is impossible to interfere with the alarm being given, even though all the boxes in a city should be turned in at the same time, entirely removing the danger of confusion arising from such a cause. When an alarm is given it will cause the big 2000 pound fire bell which is so placed in position on a tower to be built immediately on Fort street hill to strike strokes equal to the number of the box, as exemplified above, thus allowing every one who knows the position of the alarm boxes to be cognizant of the vicinity of the fire. At the Central a gravity battery of ninety cells is the motive power. A galvanometer is also kept there to test the strength and integrity of the circuit, tap bells, keys and indicators, besides which, inside of each indicator case there is a test board to test the condition of the lines at all times. Thirty, out of thirty-five boxes, are all set up, for which about sixty miles of wire were laid, with 400 poles distributed over fifteen miles of superficiality. The alarms are to be found from East Los Angeles to Washington Gardens, and from the western part of the city, across the hills to Boyle Heights. Wm. F. Griggs is the superintendent of the placing of the wires and poles and W. Barker, instrument maker of the Richmond, attends to the indicators until they shall be turned over to the Fire Department. L. H. McCullough, the electric superintendent of the Richmond Fire Alarm Company, has general charge at present. Below are given the numbers and locations of the boxes, with the exception of five, which will not be in place for a day or two:

- 21—Police Headquarters.
- 43—Fifth and Spring streets.
- 15—Spring and Main, near Ninth street.

The Oxyamel Club met at Mr. L. Shively's, at 849 South Hill street, on Monday night. They had a very interesting literary and musical programme, and there was quite a number of distinguished visitors present. The Oxyamel has been in existence about three years and is increasing in interest. The next meeting is to be held Monday week, at the house of C. Laux, 833 Fort street. The subject of the meeting was "American Art and Artists." Mr. Fred Clark, principal of the Central school, is the President of the club.

HOUSES IN DEMAND.

Where to Put All the People Who Come Here.

It is just the edge of the winter season and the great rush of people from the East does not get to its main flow until some six weeks later than this.

All through the summer there were about 250 houses all the time in course of construction. The winter is upon us, and still all over the city the clatter of the carpenter's hammer and the whizz of his busy saw is heard. If one goes to the top of any of the hills he will observe new houses, with their unstained shingles and fresh paint, by the hundreds in all directions. During the season there have been finished daily some 2, 3 or up to 5 houses. There are an average probably of 3 being finished now every day, and this will be kept up all through the winter. This activity in building is to be noticed in all parts of the city. Along the cable roads the boom is at flood tide height. Boyle Heights is rapidly being covered with new houses in all directions. East Los Angeles is another quarter where a house a day at least is turned over by the builder to the impatient owner. Along Buena Vista street, between the river and the ungraded hill near the center of the city there are half a dozen new houses going up. Near the corner of Bellevue avenue there are two cottages nearly finished on Buena Vista street. This same wonderful building excitement extends to Agricultural Park, some four miles from the city center on the south. Even beyond there, far outside the city limits, new houses are going up by the dozens. All along the extension of Second street toward Main a new house a day is about the order of things.

One would suppose that such a state of affairs would have called for a caption to this article which would read a surplus of houses. But the caption above is the proper one. One can visit every real estate office in the city and not find a house to let. There are three renters on the wing to secure every new house turned over to the proprietor. The only way to get a house is to speak for it before the foundation is laid.

Among the new houses built there were many fine boarding houses. Probably a dozen of these have been opened since last spring. Then the hotel accommodations have been amazingly extended. There is not only the Nadeau in the city, but there is the great Raymond at Pasadena; then there is the Palomares at Pomona; in all the small towns in and adjoining counties there is a new hotel in each. Mr. Scott has the big Arcadia at Santa Monica, nearly ready to open. In spite of all this preparation for the winter season, every nook and corner of the county is filled with people, and the question is to get ready for the next party.

A HARD CASE.

Given Away by Getting into a Fight on the Street.

J. L. Cruz and Manuel Lopez were arrested on Monday evening for fighting on Upper Main street. When Lopez was searched at the police station a gold necklace was found upon him, which was soon after identified by one Aniseto Meyers, who lives on New Main street. She claimed that Manuel Lopez came to whitewash her house on the 22nd inst. with another individual, and whilst so engaged managed to steal the necklace, which is valued at $20, a pair of $15 gold earrings, a $15 gold brooch, a $20 piece and two silver dollars, all contained in a watch. Consequently she swore out a charge of grand larceny against Lopez and the other man, who is also a Mexican and named A. Iscto Guzman. This Manuel Lopez is a very hard customer. He was discharged from the penitentiary on August 5th after serving five years for the embezzlement of some horses. Since then he has been arrested on suspicion and for battery several times. In justice to Mr. J. L. Cruz, it is here stated that all the connection he had with Lopez was to knock him down for an insult. Lopez and Guzman were held for examination on Saturday at 2 o'clock in the sum of $500 apiece, which they were unable to give, and consequently they were sent to the county jail.

SWEET SIXTEEN.

A Chance for an Iowa Bargain on the Heights.

Lucia B. Griffin, daughter of the County Clerk of Monroe county, Iowa, writes to the County Clerk of this county from Albia to inform him that she is the owner of a lot on Angelino Heights, for which she paid $750. She is undecided whether to keep or sell it, but rather thinks that $900 would do the job. The fair Lucia has enclosed in the letter her photograph, which is that of a very pretty blonde, with an epigle smile such as must astonish the sedate Iowans when they look in its sunny rays. The picture is worth more than the lot, with-out speaking disparagingly of that. If Lucia is disposed to visit her lot once more before selling it, she will be forced to cast it here as the knowing young fellows of Los Angeles will never allow her to depart in a state of single blessedness.

Grand Ball at San Pedro.

A grand ball will be given at Crocker's Hall, San Pedro, Thanksgiving evening, Thursday next, by the San Pedro Brass Band, which, under the leadership of Jack Willis, has become one of the best bands in the county. Tickets of admission will be 75 cents.

A Train Ditched.

Freight train No. 22 west-bound yesterday went over the rails the other side of Bowie, A. T. One of the brakemen was badly injured by the escaping steam. Seven cars and the engine was wrecked. It will probably delay the passenger train due here to-day.

A LIE EXPOSED!

WE CANNOT BUT ADMIRE THE EFFRONTERY OF ONE OF OUR COMPETITORS in Los Angeles, who brazenly asserts through the columns of the public press that he has the largest stock and carries the finest BOOTS and SHOES in this city. At the same time we feel that we must puncture this "little bag of wind." Here we assert, and are abundantly able to back our assertion with facts, that

We Carry the Largest Stock

Boots and Shoes on the Pacific Coast,

With but one single exception in the city of San Francisco. WE ARE THE SOLE AGENTS FOR EDWIN C. BURT'S LADIES' FINE SHOES, which we sell for 65 per pair and upwards. Every shoe merchant knows that this firm will only place their goods with largest and finest house in every city in the United States, hence we keep these goods. ANOTHER THING: That we lead the shoe trade in this city is abundantly proven by the fact that our style of doing business is always being copied by our small-brained competitors. We expect to see this "ad." copied. We have grown used to such actions, and always look to see them after any new innovation of ours.

LET THEM COPY THESE PRICES and we challenge them to display the same goods at the same figures:
